FOREWORD

FORTY-FIVE YEARS IS A LONG TIME IN PICTURES — however, after 45 years, it would seem impossible to find some new thought to key this annual foreword to The Film Daily's Year Book of Motion Pictures, and yet. . . . The executive who directs the destiny of one of the leading American film companies supplied one in discussing the industry's standard reference volume. "I like to call it my million dollar treasury of facts," he observed, adding, "I may be low in the valuation by a million or two."

He explained that if the Year Book was non-existant, the industry would find it necessary to create it, and starting from scratch, the cost of research and compilation spanning 45 years would soar into the seven figures.

This much we who work upon the Year Book, day in and day out, do know — it is in many respects the distillate of more than four decades of editorial endeavor, not to mention the publishing experience.

Thus there is no substitute and there never can be one.

To all of those whose untiring efforts are represented in this 45th Edition, our deep appreciation and thanks for a job well done.

"In an industry that has been beset with problems for quite a few years...we still take a lot of things for granted. We flip a light switch and expect the lights to come on. We lift a telephone and expect to get a dial tone. Sometimes, it doesn't happen.

For almost Fifty Years our industry has enjoyed a service that has fed Showmanship to our Lobbies and our Screens with very much the same regularity that the electric company has supplied light for our marquees.

Despite a constantly diminishing market... changing releasing procedures . . . increased operating costs . . . and most of the problems that beset Exhibitors themselves . . .

NATIONAL SCREEN SERVICE

continues to supply Trailers and Accessories nationally . . . to promote Showmanship in the theatres . . . to develop new advertising tools for Special Shows, the Holidays and for any purpose that might conceivably aid the Box Office, despite the financial risk involved. It is one company that provides a valuable service to Exhibitors and Distributors alike."

THE NUMBER ONE MYTH
ABOUT AMERICAN MOVIES

By ERIC JOHNSTON

President, Motion Picture Association of America

WHAT'S the number one myth about American movies today? I can tell you. It's the myth that U. S. films are hurting this country's image abroad. I say this is nonsense. I want to explode this myth here and now.

Most U. S. films do a good job for America around the world. The peoples of the globe like and respect American films. It's a fiction to pretend otherwise.

This is not a defense of all pictures. Nor is it a whitewash of the bad ones that come from Hollywood. No defense can be offered for such films. They deserve none. But I must insist they are a minority.

I'm speaking of the bulk of American filmmaking. This merits a vigorous defense.

Tons of documented evidence is available. All of it would help to explode the myth. But I prefer to do it another way.

I want to set forth four reasons for my belief that American movies have a beneficial impact abroad:

1. The American motion picture conveys all the images of America—not just one.

I question the whole assumption that there is a single true image of America. I don't think one exists.

Isn't this country, perhaps more than any other, made up of a multitude of images, impressions, and concepts? Isn't it a nation of infinite, endless variety? Aren't we proud of this diversity? Isn't it a strength?

2. The American motion picture is a successful communicator of ideas.

I think the motion picture is one of our most effective pipelines for channeling ideas to the rest of the world.

From its earliest days, the motion picture has let the world share American ideas—and, yes, American dreams. These ideas have told the world what we are, what we believe, and what we hope to be.

This picture pipeline transmits both concrete and abstract ideas. Hasn't it shown the world this nation's abundance? Hasn't it portrayed the wealth of goods and services that a democratic people can enjoy?

Along with these concrete things, it has mirrored some important abstractions. It has emphasized our dedication to liberty. It has pointed up our devotion to justice. Above all, it has shown the world that in America the individual counts.

I have one response to those who worry so much about the impact of films abroad: "This is a great nation. If you believe it, why fear what the motion picture will show?"

3. The American motion picture is the creation of free men.

The American film is conceived in freedom. It must never be turned into an instrument of propaganda. It must always express the free ideas of a free people. This is its power.

Unquestionably, this kind of freedom means that we run risks. The artistic judgment of some will be poor. Tasteless films will be made from time to time. But when was freedom in our country ever the exclusive property of the artistic and the tasteful?

We're kidding ourselves if we think that foreign audiences cannot distinguish truth from propaganda. They know. In this knowledge rests the power of the free film over the totalitarian film.

We're the victor every time.

4. The American motion picture is a world picture.

Time has seen the U. S. film become a truly global film. The world is its territory.

If the motion picture seems to focus more on the ills of the world, maybe it has a good reason. How else do we rid our civilization of evils unless we expose them? Hasn't art always served to illuminate the dark corners of society?

Here is where, I believe, the American motion picture is having a beneficial impact. Unquestionably, this is where the motion picture can use its unlimited potential in the future. This is how the American motion picture industry can best serve the nation and the world.

The industry asks, in return, only for the right to exercise, in freedom, its best judgment in shaping the future.

1962: News Notes

By WILLIAM SPECHT
Associate Editor of THE FILM DAILY

NINETEEN SIXTY-TWO was a year of apparent contradictions in which the fires of enthusiasm were again ignited and new theatres were built even as the shears of economy cut away at distribution.

It was an unusually quiet period newswise during which the virtues of keeping production costs down were frequently preached while "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Cleopatra" ate dollars by the millions.

It was a year that found television competition remain formidable largely through the aid of newer theatrical films which played prime video time.

And it was a year, too, that saw censorship crumble under the impact of court decisions but strangely found public support of censorship and classification either growing stronger or making more clamor.

EXHIBITION

EXHIBITION in 1962 continued to face certain basic problems which it had in the year before and the years before that.

Print shortages, availabilities, product shortages, television competition, censorship and the problem of audiences, were again in the foreground. Despite this, 1962 was a year of optimism confidently expressed by new ventures in theatre building. The amount of construction for Cinerama alone would have appeared an exaggeration with the thinking that characterized 1960-61 and a trend to build movie houses in shopping centers revealed itself as new theatres were planned for such areas.

There too was a wider acceptance of foreign product, a rise in art houses, some of which were actually nudie houses. Reaching the public continued to be a job requiring skill and labor with evidence of more exhibitor-distributor cooperation. This task of getting to audiences was made more difficult by strikes which prevented newspapers from publishing for lengthy periods in Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis and New York.

Theatres in the south felt the pressure for desegregation, which was accomplished gradually in several areas without fuss or tar and feathers, and several theatres tried trading stamps as business builders with uncertain results.

DISTRIBUTION

FOR YEARS production has been complaining about the costs of distribution and demanding that something be done about it. For years sectors of exhibition have been complaining about the patterns of release and demanding that something be done about it.

And all the time corporate heads had their feelers out to see where distribution costs could be pared.

All of this had resulted in the change of some release patterns, the discharge of inspectresses and clerks and the closing of exchange centers, but it remained for 1962 to bring out dramatic developments.

It was in this year that United Artists, with suitable fanfare, broke with a tradition of 40 years in the New York area and by passing the usual runs, put into effect its "Premiere Showcase" plan. Under this system, "The Road to Hong Kong" opened in 11 sub run keys day and date with its downtown first-runs. The radical change was that this system of runs went around the theatres operated by Loew's and RKO, considered an important segment of the market. And since Loew's and RKO showed no inclination to give up their positions of first-run after Broadway, the move obviously ignored these theatres in the belief that greater revenues and larger, as well as new, audiences could be reached by the "Premiere Showcase" method. To date 10 features have been released in this pattern. UA seems satisfied by the results and the company committed itself to a year's trial.

CENSORSHIP: FOUR LETTER WORD WINS

So far "Premiere Showcase" as a regular policy seems confined to New York with 20th-Fox adopting it bag and barrel for "The Lion" and "Sodom and Gomorrah." The company by-passed downtown Detroit to open "Gigot" in two suburban theatres but this appeared to be an isolated incident, not a policy.

Twentieth-Fox, however, has gone farther in "streamlining" distribution. In Italy distribution has been turned over to the Haggiag Bros., a move thought to be the forerunner of other changes. In the U. S., whole branches were eliminated with Albany and New Haven consolidating with New York, Milwaukee with Chicago, Portland, Seattle, Oklahoma City with Dallas, Omaha with Des Moines.

The Theatre Owners of America, with Warner Bros., tested the "Hollywood Preview Engagement" release plan (described under Warner Bros. in Corporate), and TOA was ready to go ahead with a second.

Down in New Orleans, Paramount broke with the past — temporarily — and tried a "showcase" plan of its own. Unable to get a boost in rentals for its usual downtown first-run outlet—the Saenger, operated by Paramount Gulf, an AB-PT subsidiary—it offered "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" to over 10 sub runs on a day-and-date basis. The new system was continued with "Hell is for Heroes," "Escape from Zaharin," "The Counterfeit Traitor," "My Geisha" and "Hatari." But after the six pictures offered under the plan had played off, Paramount reportedly issued alternate bids in which the exhibitor might bid either for multiple or exclusive run, and Paramount was back in the Saenger again under the pattern of clearances it had briefly abandoned.

CENSORSHIP & CLASSIFICATION

IT TAKES Webster's International Dictionary some 63 words to define "obscene." But it has taken law-makers, jurists, critics and other commentators many times that to define what they mean by the word. Yet the charge that something is "obscene" remains difficult to establish.

This difficulty is one that disciples of movie censorship and mandatory classification have to meet and are trying to meet with the result that during 1962 efforts were made to rewrite laws to establish the connection between an "obscene" film and the party or parties who present it, or, pardon us, who "knowingly" present it.

But if those who favor censorship or mandatory classification have their difficulties, it doesn't imply that those who oppose censorship or mandatory classification haven't their difficulties also.

The somber fact is that support of both censorship and mandatory classification, especially the latter, seems to increase. In 1962 when the New York State Legislature had before it a measure whereby the state censor machinery would classify pictures for children, the New York State Council of Churches (Protestant) came to the support of the measure which passed the Lower House to die in the Senate. In 1963, when an identical measure was introduced again, Roman Catholic organizations added the strength of their support. Which was to be anticipated because the Episcopal Committee for Motion Pictures, Radio and Television, under which the National Legion of Decency functions, had come out for mandatory classification wherever the industry did not do its own classifying.

But the force to keep censorship and other regulations perish, whether it be neighborhood factions such as are behind the Oakwood, Ohio, move, or a factional group such as exists in Atlanta.

This is happening as courts continue to whittle away at censorship and tighten the legal corset that has encircled "obscenity." The case of "The Connection" and the empire state of New York emphasize this point.

The motion picture division of the State Education Department had denied "The Connection" a license for commercial exhibition on the grounds that the use of a four-letter word as a synonym for heroin, was "obscene."

The producer, Allen Hogdon Productions, and the distributor, Films Around the World, decided to open the picture at the D. W. Griffith Theatre in New York City without a license. They got in two performances before the censors halted the exhibition by temporary injunction from the State Supreme Court. Eventually the Supreme Court held that the use of that four-letter word was not obscene, a ruling that was upheld by New York's highest tribunal, the State Court of Appeals. "The Connection" reopened at the D. W. Griffith where, despite all its publicity, it failed to make the grade of a sensational success, proving that four letter words can't carry a film.

Atlanta's wall of censorship, which had withstood attack since the ordinance was passed in 1915, crumbled under the attack of one defiant distributor, after cracking under an earlier attack. K. Gordon Murray Productions set the fuse that blew censorship out of the law by refusing to submit "Wasted Lives" and "Birth of Twins" to censor review before opening them commercially. In the legal battle that followed, the Georgia Supreme Court found the censor ordinance unconstitutional under the Georgia Constitution.

Defeated on censorship, the city of Atlanta took refuge in a classification ordinance by which films would either be classified "approved," "unsuited to young persons," or "objectionable" and exhibitors would be compelled to publish the ratings.

This too was declared invalid by the Fulton County Superior Court Judge Durwood Pye, who ruled that the city lacked authority to establish classification. The ruling in the case brought by Columbia Pictures and other member companies of the Motion Picture Association of America on appeal by the city of Atlanta, Judge Pye was reversed.

But the problem of harassing restrictions remains, be it censorship or classification. And those who look upon classification as an arm of censorship can make a plausible argument. The Quebec censor, for example, wants a classification law. Censors in New York and elsewhere have turned to the support of classification when their powers are curbed.

Maryland faced a classification proposal to rate pictures as suited for children. Tighter censorship loomed in the far-off Philippines. Ronald Freeman of the Rex, Baltimore, challenged the Maryland censor licensing law by showing "Surf Side 8" without a license and was promptly charged under the law. The Maryland censor board incidentally "modified" 40 films during the year and rejected three—"The Immoral Mr. Teas," "The Naked Camera" and "Shangri-La."

In Columbus, Ohio, the Common Pleas Court reversed a municipal court conviction of Mrs. Lana Lake, cashier of the Little Art Theatre. The higher court found that there was no proof that Mrs. Lake had control over the films the house played, or that she knew the films were obscene.

In Oakwood, O., citizens were pressing for a licensing ordinance against the community's only theatre—the Far Hills—whose manager, Edward Eads, had been indicted for showing an "obscene" film in "The Immoral Mr. Teas." A number of legal actions came out of this one including a suit for nearly a million dollars filed by Eads against a group of citizens whom he accused of false and malicious persecution.

Showing of "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" at the World Art, Columbus, O., resulted in confiscation of the film and the charge against the management for "giving an immoral exhibition." Showing o"The Lovers" at the Cleveland Heights Theatre resulted in the arrest of manager Nicolo Jacobellis and a fine of $2,500. An appeal was carried to the U.S. Supreme Court which may review the case.

Another form of censorship was discovered in New York City where License Commissioner Bernard J. O'Connell told the press that he would suspend the license of the Tivoli Theatre for "False Fronts" which misled the public. The reason for this action was twofold: to move against theatre fronts which advertised scenes or situations not in the picture and thereby misled ticket purchasers; to strike at nudity in theatre fronts. Commissioner O'Connel never did suspend the Tivoli license because the Tivoli went to court and got a temporary restraining order which ran on and on as the case didn't come to trial. But the Commissioner had made his point. The Tivoli and some seven other theatres changed the type of their fronts.

LEGISLATION

THE INDUSTRY WAS PLAGUED as usual by legislation which centered largely on censorship taxes (discussed under separate heading), blue laws, minimum wages and obscenity bills.

On this same front, the industry succeeded threat, an obscenity bill, which was a carry over from another session, which slipped past both houses. It provided that authorities could seize prints of a film they considered obscene, seize the equipment, and close the theatre for as much as a year. It failed to become law.

On this same front the industry succeeded in having a tax measure which would have discriminated against movie earnings abroad so that movies would get the same treatment as other American industries abroad. The same bill retained a clause whereby those earning salaries of more than $20,000 a year abroad would be subject to income taxes.

A minimum wage bill for employees in Washington, D.C. saw the light of day but failed to pass in 1962 (the Federal minimum wage act now in force exempts theatre employees.) But New York City provided exhibitors of that city a headache of martini-sized proportion, a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour (going up to $1.50 a year later). Exhibitors fought it unsuccessfully but did get "part time" theatre employes (20 hours a week or less) exempted. However, it took the laundries to give the law a real scrubbing. Fighting their way up through the State Supreme Court, where they lost, the Wholesale Laundry Board of Trade and eight of its member laundries, reached the Appelate Division of the Supreme Court. This reviewing body found the law "invalid." As the city had been enjoined from enforcing its law by an injunction issued, pending the Appelate Court's ruling, the minimum wage ordinance never really took effect. But it was a close call.

The Blue Law question took on a rosier hue. Where the trend was to enforce Sunday closings, theatres were noticeably free of restrictions and continued to operate. In fact, in Indiana, where a Sunday closing measure was introduced to the General Assembly, theatres were specifically exempted from the closing provisions.

And in the same Hoosier state, the Supreme Court, in considering the 57-year old Sunday closing law, took time out to say that the closing restrictions did not apply to theatres, remarking: "Employment in . . . theatres may be considered as a work of necessity within the purview of the law." Vancouver, B.C. offered a proposition to the voters enabling them to have Sunday movies if they wished. In Michigan there was sentiment toward the repeal of blue laws.

TAXATION

HOW TO GET full repeal of a tax from which it already had won the concession of partial exemption occupied the individual and collective thinking of the industry during 1962. In 1956, the industry, led by Robert W. Coyne and the Council of Motion Picture Organiziations, after repeated attempts, won a startling victory in which all tickets under $1 were exempted from the Federal admission tax. The benefit to exhibition, distribution and production was immediate.

But time worked its changes. Coyne went to the Distilled Spirits Institute as head of that organization and the industry in view of rising admissions and an increase of road shows, found the exemption on tickets priced at less than $1 was not to be the windfall it once had been. Industry was ready to move for full repeal in 1963.

Elsewhere tax matters were more or less quiet. In Pennsylvania a movement to get the state law enabling cities to levy amusement taves repealed continued. And in New York that state's enabling act led to a very brisk skirmish as the Cove, Tower and Glen Cove theatres and the city of Glen Cove on Long Island fought it out.

The city, using the authority granted to it by the state to levy a tax of up to five per cent on amusement admissions, passed an ordinance taxing theatre admissions but ignoring all other amusement admissions. The theatres went to court arguing that the ordinance was discriminatory and violated the state, enabling act which applied to all amusements and did not authorize any exemptions. After hearings which went on over several months, the court agreed with the exhibitors and the law was invalidated.

LITIGATION

TIME THERE WAS that when one spoke of industry suits, one meant anti-trust actions. But times change, as the apostles of the cliche would point out, and the nature of the industry suits seemed to grow more varied with actions arising out of censorship and actions concerned with piracy taking the spotlight.

True, there are still anti-trust suits with Trueman Rembusch of Syndicate Theatres furnishing a case that may set a record for its wordage and length. Rembusch is suing seven distributors and two theatre corporations, charging $2,700,000 worth of conspiracy which he alleges denied Syndicate theatres pictures until "their novelty had worn off."

And in Federal Court in New York the B&B Plaza of Scarsdale, N.Y. asks for $600,000 treble damages from M-G-M, Paramount Film Distributing, Columbia, United Artists, 20th Century-Fox, Universal, Allied Artists, Buena Vista, Loew's Theatres and RKO Theatres. Charge is that the defendants conspire to keep the Plaza playing behind the Loew's and RKO houses.

But there were suits of another nature. Music publisher Gil Snaper tried to halt showing of the Spanish film, "Viridiana," on the allegation that a song he wrote and recorded under the shimmering title of "Shimmy Doll" was used in the Gustave Alatriste production. Union Films, the distributor of the film and against whom Snaper filed suit, retorted that it did not own the picture but was actually a "commission merchant" selling the film. The case has yet to be decided.

ORGANIZATIONS: ALLIED IN COMEBACK

And an interesting point of law—that the exhibition of a film without its copyright notice does not put it in the public domain—was handed down by New York Supreme Court Justice Vincent A. Lupiano in a suit brought by Brandon Films against Arjay Enterprises. Brandon had charged Arjay with infringement of a common law copyright by exhibiting two German films at the New Yorker Theatre, which Arjay operates.

Active, too, was the courthouse in the field of 16mm piracy where the industry copyright law firm of Sargoy & Stein moved against film pirates.

In Boston the Federal Court ruled in favor of seven major distributors against Leon Duquette, charged with unauthorized distribution of 30 features. The distributors received $32,000 in damages. In New York Charles Vitale and his Cee-Vee Motion Picture Service signed a consent decree with Allied Artists agreeing to an injunction restraining him from renting "Herod the Great." Vitale signed a broader decree with Walt Disney restraining him from using any Disney product.

In Los Angeles six distributors were awarded $17,750 damages against William Foley and his Associated Productions for unauthorized use of their product. In New York Universal charged Karl Martens of Vestal and Clayton Hawkes of Castle Creek with unauthorized use of 49 features and 44 cartoons. And in Minneapolis Monroe Hodroff of Bloomington was indicted in the unauthorized use of $200,000 worth of 16mm film over a period extending from 1958.

But the long language of the law extended to a variety of cases. In Detroit, for example, Projectionist Roy Light sued the union's past president, D. F. Erskine, and its present business agent, Roy Ruben, charging that intimidation had been used against him. Federal Judge Thornton P. Thornton ordered a union referendum to determine whether the members approved of a proposed settlement. Over in New York Federal Judge Archie O. Dawson stayed a $4,000,000 anti-trust suit against three Spanish film firms—Azteca Films, Clas-Mohme and Mexfils—as well as 20 exhibitors by A&R Theatres and seven other exhibitors. The Judge ordered the plaintiffs to post $500 each as security costs.

ORGANIZATIONS

TO THE ALLIED STATES ASSOCIATION OF MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS, its 1962 convention in Cleveland during December must have been as welcome, to get on with the cliches, as the flowers that bloom in the Spring. Well attended it was a sign of a strength surging through an organization which only a year before had been trying to cement the cracks of dissatisfaction and overcome the loss of regional unit membership.

Allied could point once again to unity, to a program which while aggressive was not extreme, a program which called for a 24-hour alert of the Allied vigilance committee, for fewer block busters and "more good, solid box office" pictures, for theatre modernization, and for research and development in the marketing of pictures and presentation techniques.

Allied further decided to take a look at the Eady Plan to see if it could be applied to American production and made arrangements for group insurance for its members in the liability and workmen's compensation fields. Jack Armstrong of Bowling Green, Ky. was elected president, succeeding Marshall Fine, who became board chairman, replacing Ben Marcus. Milton London remained executive secretary.

THE ACADEMY OF MOTION PICTURE ARTS AND SCIENCES held its Awards program for the second consecutive year in the Santa Monica Auditorium where "West Side Story" was the winner of the best picture Oscar and nine other Oscars. The telecast of the event was estimated to have been viewed by 90 million people, some two and a half times as many as those who viewed the first Oscar telecast 10 years ago.

Wendell Corey was reelected president as were all other officers.

AMPA—the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers—of New York elected Ted Arnow, publicity chief of Loew's Theatres, president to replace Al Floersheimer, whose term expired, and embarked upon a campaign to "Promote the Theatre." AMPA awards went to Cinerama as "the film company making the greatest progress in motion pictures in 1962"; to Philip F. Harling as "the exhibitor making the outstanding contribution in 1962 in connection with his efforts to defeat toll TV"; to William Castle for showmanship; to National Screen Service for service; to United Artists for a "sustained flow of product"; to Loew's Theatres for its public service in behalf of the Academy Awards.

COMPO—the Council of Motion Picture Organizations had been active in helping exhibition put into effect the COMPO mass merchandising film plan. The plan, by which exhibitors and distributors get together to promote multiple bookings of a selected picture. was used with solid success in the Boston, Pittsburgh and Cincinnatti areas.

COMPO: WORDS ON 5-POINT PROGRAM

Then at a general membership meeting held Nov. 20 at the Americana Hotel, New York, which saw more enthusiasm than is usually noted at COMPO meetings, COMPO adopted the following five point program:

1. To educate the public on censorship.

2. To study the feasibility of seeking full repeal of Federal admission taxes. (As a result of this study, COMPO in 1963 was working for the excise levy's elimination).

3. To act against the elimination of exemptions of theatre employees from the Federal minimum wage law.

4. To study whether COMPO should cooperate with the industry in seeking increased production and whether an American Eady Plan should be fostered.

5. To work on a plan submitted by Robert Selig for audience participation in nominating best actors, actresses etc.

Eugene Picker was appointed a member of the COMPO governing committee as a representative of the Motion Picture Association of America, to replace the deceased A. Montague. The other two members of the committee are Abe Marmus, for Allied, and Sam Pinanski, TOA.

IFIDA—the Independent Film Importers and Distributors of America—rounded out the third year of its existence, a husky organization which gained prestige as it gained membership. During 1962 it continued its fight against censorship, joining forces with the MPAA. Also, on the prestige side it increased the number of its annual film awards to seven.

MPAA—the Motion Picture Association of America—started the year in new offices in New York and old problems everywhere. Censorship and legislation continued to be major time-taking, heart breaking tasks and though both these subjects remained problems in 1963, they were at least contained in 1962.

MPAA and IFIDA—the Independent Film Importers and Distributors of America — found a common battle ground in the war against censorship and other forms of restraint, and both found they could fight together.

The MPAA further studied the "industry image" obviously stirred to action by the fact that in too many areas the "image" was tarnished. Much of this resulted from pictures which do not bear the Code seal, but what to do about that continued to be a messy question.

President Eric Johnston kept his voice lifted against censorship, warning, in an address to the Franklin County (Ohio) Motion Picture Association, not to play with the fires of censorship and asking parents (again and again) to protect their children from the loss of liberties that spring from censorship. Johnston's voice was heard as the nation's capital faced a drastic "obscenity" law which would permit authorities considering a picture obscene, to seize the print and the projection equipment and close the theatre for as long as a year. The proposed law never became law in fact for though it passed both houses, it didn't get by the President.

But the MPAA faced another problem. Opposed to mandatory classification by law, its support of voluntary classification through The Green Sheet is thought to have established a form of compulsion ratings. This could happen in areas where The Green Sheet classifications are furnished the public through the press by local film groups. A report that it was planned to drop ratings from The Green Sheet, started something of a tempest in a tea pot, as those faithful to cliches might put it. Anyway The Green Sheet still carries the classifications given the movies by the sheet's reviewing organizations and much is made of the fact that parents can get a good idea about the movies their offspring can see —if the children have the price of admission and permission of the parents to go to the show.

The Green Sheet found that of 174 features it classified in 1962, 30 were "adult." In 1961, out of 188 classified, 43 bore the "adult" tag.

During the year the MPAA held a continuing study on industry participation in the New York World's Fair of 1964 but little came of that. Talks with TESMA on a joint venture bore no results an dth esubject was carried over into 1963.

AS PRESIDENT OF THE MPEA—Motion Picture Export Assn.—Johnston continued to circle the globe by plane. He looked upon Africa as an important new market, pointed out that India needed more theatres as an outlet for American films, and took a hand in various negotiations.

Though import restrictions on films and export restrictions on remittances remained problems, the MPEA worked hard, long and well toward surmounting or circumventing them.

Pakistan doubled film tariffs in 1961, a restrictive step which forced MPEA members to suspend film shipments to that country. By negotiations in 1962 the MPEA won a new deal by which the import tax was reduced and it was arranged for the import of 210 features plus newsreels and shorts over a 12-month period.

New agreements governing film imports were also signed with Italy, France, India and the Argentina, while in Brazil, the MPEA was successful in freeing blocked funds.

TOA: SETS UP 'HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW'

AMPP—the Association of Motion Picture Producers—reelected all officers including Eric Johnston, president and Y. Frank Freeman, board chairman.

TESMA—the Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Assn.—early in the year considered a proposal by TEDA—the Theatre Equipment Dealers Assn.—that the two organizations unite to form a single unit embracing equipment manufacturers and dealers. The subject came up in Chicago at the separate meetings of both organizations but was allowed to die quietly. Reasons: No concrete plan had been offered; lack of enthusiasm on the part of several TESMA members; possibility that the Justice Department would take the view that any organization which brought together the makers of equipment with the sellers of equipment, might take on the color of monopoly and sound a note of action in concert.

On its own, TESMA approved the creation of a research body to function along the lines of the Motion Picture Research Council which had been mustered out of service by the force of economics. The plan was described to manufacturers, dealers and producers and exhibitors with the intention that all would share in the annual cost, estimated at less than $100,000. But as the devotees of cliches might remark, hell is paved with good intentions, and the TESMA plan never got off the ground in 1962. Some—a few—hope that it will take shape in 1963.

TEDA—the Theatre Equipment Dealers Assn.—continued to seek cooperation between exhibitors, manufacturers and dealers. E. H. Geisler was elected president of the organization.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC National Legion of Decency handed out more "Separate Classifications" this year than at any time since this special category was instituted in 1958 when it was used for the first time on "Martin Luther." In 1962 ten features, three of which were foreign, were so listed which means that while the Legion considers they are "not morally offensive in themselves," they require "caution" and some analysis and explanation as a protection to the uninformed against wrong interpretations and false conclusions. A Separate Classification was accorded "Victim," a British import dealing with homosexuality.

The Legion also had its largest number of C or "Condemned" features in 1962 when 15 features, all of which were foreign, were rated in this category.

The Roman Catholic position that where the industry does not classify pictures itself, it would be well to establsih classification by law—a view now officially expressed—was suggested by Msgr. Thomas F. Little, S.T.L., executive secretary of the Legion, in an address at Fordham University. Msgr. Little told his audience that if the industry did not classify its product voluntarily, the public might demand classification by legislation.

But Msgr. Little views classification as a two-way street where if the Legion says "Stay Away," it will also say, "We Recommend." In June he published a list of films which the organization he heads regarded as "superior entertainment" recommended for "the entire family."

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES (Protestant) has been studying the question of recommending films during the year. Film critics for Protestant papers also have formed a Protestant Film Critics Guild as a forum to exchange views on motion pictures.

TOA—Theatre Owners of America—touched off one of the most unusual trade news stories when it persuaded Warner Bros. to advance the release date of "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane" from February, 1963 to November, 1962.

TOA was concerned with the dearth of product for that period and decided to ballyhoo the film as a "Hollywood Preview Engagement," which would offer the film full exhibition support in as many situations as possible. The "Jane" engagement rang up over 1,000 playdates by the time it opened and what would have been a middle of the road picture was a sensational success. The "Hollywood Preview Engagement" appeared slated to become a regular event.

The TOA convention at Miami Beach reelected John H. Stembler, president; pledged itself to a last ditch fight against toll TV; heard Stanley Warner General Counsel Stuart Aarons advise that exhibitors could retaliate against films which were sold to TV by not buying them for theatres.

The convention further heard Sumner Redstone predict a trade revolution; considered the Eady for the U. S.; listened to Spyros P. Skouras as he asked that a way be found to guarantee producers against loss.

Stembler, too, deplored the headline dispute between talent and management which he termed bad public relations.

The TOA records show that there were fewer American-made pictures in 1962 and more foreign. During the year TOA had asked the National Association of Broadcasters to act against trailers on TV which made false assertions about the movies on TV. Chief complaint seems to have been over the use of the word "CinemaScope." The NAB couldn't see it TOA's way.

TOLL TV: OVER AIR SYSTEM STARTS

THE MOTION PICTURE PIONEERS elected Herman Robbins of National Screen, president and selected Milton R. Rackmil of Universal as the Pioneer of 1962.

THE INDUSTRY'S HOSPITAL—the Will Rogers Hospital and O'Donnell Research Laboratories—completed a $650,000 building and equipment program which includes new living quarters for the personnel and a new building for the O'Donnell Research Laboratories which began a study of Alestin tissues in connection with heart and lung ailments. The laboratories are housed in a two-story building offering 16,000 square feet of space.

The completed building program included, in addition to the laboratories, a new two and three room apartment building for the doctors, a new 26 one-room efficiency apartment building for nurses, and 32-room living quarters for other personnel.

The year also saw the first session of the Summer Research Institute, attended by doctor and students from elsewhere.

WOMPI—the Association of Women of the Motion Picture Industry—made a modest change of name at its convention in Kansas City last September and became the International Association of the Women of the Motion Picture Industry in deference to the fact that the organization became international when a chapter was formed in Toronto. WOMPI elected Mrs. Jean Mullins o. Atlanta, president, donated $2,000 (a repeat performance) toward the support of a room at the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital, welcomed Indianapolis as a new chapter, and selected Dallas as the city for its 1963 convention.

THE VARIETY CLUBS INTERNATIONAL held its 35th annual convention in Dublin where the record of humanitarian activities of its tents was studied and the London tent was declared the recipient of the Heart Award. The Humanitarian Award went to Frank Duffy, 73-year old founder of the Legion of Mercy. The tents raised some $2,385,736.99 for charities (leader, New England with $620,816 for the Children's Cancer Research Foundation; second, Miami with $393,171.56 for its Variety Children's Hospital; third, London with $330,000 for its Heart of Variety, Ltd.) H. V. (Rotus) Harvey of San Francisco, was elected chief barker with James Carreras of London, first assistant chief barker; Ralph Pries of Philadelphia, second assistant chief barker; J. J. Fitzgibbons of Toronto, property master, and Joseph Polodoff of Minneapolis, Dough Guy.

ACE—the American Congress of Exhibitors (not to be confused with A.C.E. Films) elected Emanuel Frisch as its chairman and then went into an apparent state of suspended animation.

TOLL TV

TOLL TV in 1962 continued to fight for a trial, and exhibition, or the larger part of exhibition, continued to fight Toll TV with propaganda in the courts and with efforts to enact legislation that would outlaw it.

In 1962, Telemeter entered the third year of its closed circuit Toll TV experiment in Etobicoke, a suburb of Toronto, and Phonevision entered the first year of its trial by air with the RKO General experiment over WHCT at Hartford.

The Hartford experiment was a defeat for exhibition which had challenged the right of the Federal Communications Commission to issue a license for a three-year trial to WHCT. Federal Courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the FCC.

Another defeat came in Little Rock, Ark., where exhibitors challenged the right of the Arkansas Public Service Commission to order the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to issue a rate schedule to furnish Midwest Video Corp. with lines for a closed circuit Telemeter installation in Little Rock. The Arkansas Supreme Court upheld the Arkansas Public Service Commission.

Furthermore another Toll TV system, Teleglobe, which transmits its pictures over the air waves unscrambled but puts the sound on wires leading into the subscriber's home, filed for FCC permission to operate over KTVR at Denver. This touched off a fight with the Colorado Committee Against Pay TV which won the right to intervene at the FCC hearings.

Meanwhile, whether Telemeter in Etobicoke had made any progress and was nearing an operation which would be in the black, remained a question. Here Telemeter had added the out-of-town hockey games to its programs, a move which proved popular. It had even gone into theatre TV presenting the games on large screens to paying audiences in the Toronto sports arena, Maple Leaf Gardens. A Telemeter executive described the theatre TV angle as an "interim thing," presumably till there were more Telemeter installations.

For a time, the question of availability of movie product for Toll TV was said to attract the attention of the Department of Justice which obviously found no conspiracy to keep pictures off Pay TV. In fact, Warner Bros. reportedly played "The Music Man" over WHCT, Hartford before its release to theatres in that area without any apparent damage to the theatre box offices.

Exhibitor resistance to Toll TV widened to include opposition to community antenna systems or CATV, unless the operators specified they were not to be used for Pay TV. The ground for this opposition was solid enough since Howard Minsky, president of Telemeter sees CATV as an arm of Pay TV and envisions the development of Telemeter by using CATV facilities.

Exhibition however is not entirely opposed to Toll TV and CATV. The Durwood Theatres are interested in Home Theatre which has Pay TV in mind. Alliance Amusement Co. has an interest in several CATV systems and would like to have CATV in every situation where it has theatres.

Though they have come out on the losing end of court battles, the Joint Committee Against Pay TV is not giving up the fight. The court actions they feel are not a waste of time since they gain time for the opponents of Toll TV. In fact, the Committee's chairman, Phil Harling, makes legal attack one of the three points opponents of Toll TV should follow. The other two are: To work on legislators at grass roots level to support laws against Pay TV; to advise his committee whenever applications for Pay TV or CATV licenses are made.

TELEVISION

THEATRICAL MOVIES ON TV for free remained a constant exhibitor gripe with several making quite a case what the distributors were losing on their current features in theatres having them compete with their older features on TV. The Independent Theatre Owners Association made up a list of 30 United Artist features available to ABC and there was hardly a major distributor whose product was not to be seen over the air.

Protests by the Theatre Owners of America to the National Association of Broadcasters that TV stations should not misrepresent its theatrical films as being in CinemaScope, etc., had little or no effect.

The industry made good use of the television medium again in 1962 when the Academy Oscar Awards presentations went on the air.

But television plus space penetrating astronauts and Telstar proved formidable if short-lived competition to theatres, with potential theatre patrons staying by the side of their TV sets as a prologue to history in communications and transportation was being made.

CORPORATE

ALLIED ARTISTS climbed back into the black with a net profit of $163,000 for the quarter ended Sept. 26, compared with a loss of $720,000 in the corresponding period of 1961. At the stockholders meeting President Steve Broidy announced a "blue print" for future activities among which was a deal with Leo Fromkess, formerly of Revue, to make five for AA release. Ernie Sands, formerly sales head at Astor joined the company as domestic general sales manager.

AMERICAN BROADCASTING-PARAMOUNT THEATRES enjoyed a third quarter net that was up 30 percent over 1961, ($2,400,000 compared to $1,886,000). Net for nine months was $8,003,000 compared to $7,550,000 in the nine months of 1961. The company declared a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents for the fourth quarter, plus a two per cent stock dividend. The ABPT added the Silver Springs, Fla. resort to its diversified holdings, and scheduled a general sprucing up of the theatres operated by its affiliate, New England Theatres, Inc.

AMERICAN-INTERNATIONAL continued to follow its successful formula of pictures that had strong exploitation possibilities as it continued to expand, acquiring its seventh branch in the U.S. and establishing an office in Paris to supervise its European business. AIP planned a schedule of 24 releases for a period spreading over into 1963.

ASTOR PICTURES, after having startled the industry with the success of "La Dolce Vita," tried to repeat with "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" and stumbled. The company, however succeeded in acquiring $2,000,000 refinancing to keep going much harder. In July, Astor acquired Pathe-America, in what was described as a program to buy other companies. George Fellerman, an Astor branch manager, was promoted to general sales manager, to replace Ernie Sands, who resigned to become general sales manager of Allied Artists. Sands in turn succeeded AA general sales manager Morey Goldstein, who went to Warner Bros. as sales chief there filling a post vacated by the resignation of Charles Boasberg, who became domestic sales manager at Paramount, an office formerly filled by Jerome Pickman.

CINERAMA, the big screen process which revolutionized the industry, forged ahead in 1962, adding some 60 odd theatres in the domestic field and approximately 40 abroad. At home "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" made its debut as the first Cinerama feature built around a plot. Abroad, the Cinerama opened "How the West Was Won" in cities as far apart as Paris and Tokyo, London and Sydney.

COLUMBIA saw a series of changes in its staff as the company books turned to black ink instead of red (net profit for fiscal year ended June 30, $2,242,000 compared to a net loss of $1,405,000 in the previous year) the company declared a two and a half per cent dividend. The personnel changes, which amounted to promotion included:

The elevation of Leo Jaffe from first vice-president to replace the late A. Montague as executive vice president; the elvation of M. J. Francovich from vic-president of Continental and British production to first vice-president; the appointment of Sol A. Schwartz to vice-president in charge of West Coast operations; the advancement of Seymour Malamed from assistant treasurer to treasurer; the appointment of Jonas Rosenfield, who had been vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, to the post of general executive officer, and the appointment of Robert S. Ferguson, national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation to the new post of executive in charge of world-wide advertising.

The officers of the company were not saddened either by the fact that Columbia's distribution of "We'll Bury You," the documentary on Communism, turned out to be good public relations and even won words of praise in the Halls of Congress.

EMBASSY PICTURES, the company Joseph Levine founded, went national with a system of 10 exchanges and went international in an arrangement by which Twentieth Century-Fox would distribute its pictures in the United Kingdom. During the year general sales director Leonard Lightstom was named executive vice-president of the company and Carl Peppercorn, formerly sales chief at Continental Distributing, was made Embassy's general sales head; Morey Marcus resigned as foreign sales chief; Sheldon Tromberg was named central division manager and Wayne Ball, western division manager.

During the year, Embassy entered several co-production deals and sold a package of 33 features to WOR-TV.

NINETY-FIVE per cent of Loew's Theatres are operating in the black, President Laurence Alan Tisch told the annual meeting of the hotel and theatre chain's stockholders. Net profit for the 26 weeks ended Feb. 28, 1962 was $1,168,000 compared with $953,700 for the corresponding period in 1961. Arthur M. Tolchin, assistant to the president, was added to the board.

M-G-M DELVED into the past during the year and came up with a series of six musical hits of former days that it reissued with such success as a "Golden Operetta Series" that it had to add six more to the program, making it an even dozen.

Earnings for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1962, however, were down to $2,589,000 as compared with the previous year's $12,677,000.

The company that Leo roars for, released 10 features in December through April, closed an agreement with Seven Arts for seven pictures at a $7,000,000 budget, and continued its association with Kalva, a laboratory technique which develops film by heat.

Appointed to new posts were Herbert Bennin, southern division manager, to replace Lou Formato, who became assistant general sales manager, and Robert Weitman, who was named studio head, replacing Sol Sugar.

NATIONAL GENERAL, formerly National Theatres and Television came from behind during 1962 with a net of $2,913,014 for the fiscal year ended Sept. 25, 1962, compared to a loss of $800,000 for the previous year. Under the leadership of President Eugene Klein, the company expanded and diversified, going in for development of properties. Irving H. Levin was named executive vice-president of the 220 theatre circuit.

PARAMOUNT listed 26 features at a cost of $80,000,000 for 1963 and took Samuel Bronston under its wing for "The Story of the Circus" and " "The Fall of the Roman Empire," for which it was understood Paramount would put up half the production costs in return for the Western Hemisphere rights. A similar deal was closed with Walter Reade-Sterling for "The Love Goddess" with Paramount getting the rights everywhere but in the western hemisphere where Reade-Sterling's Continental Distributing has the distribution.

CORPORATE: RKO TOASTS 75th YEAR

Earnings were down with the net for nine months estimated at $594,000 compared with the net of $5,310,000 for the corresponding nine months of last year.

The year saw shifts in personnel with domestic general sales manager Jerome Pickman leaving and Charles Boasberg, then of Warner Bros., taking his place. George Weltner, president of Paramount Film Distributing, the sales subsidiary, became executive vice-president of the parent company, Paramount Pictures, Paul Raibourn, a vice-president became a senior vice president; Henri Marchant was named a special sales head for abroad; Y. Frank Freeman, veteran studio executive, was appointed head of a new Special Facilities Division, and Alfred R. Taylor became western division manager to replace Howard Minsky, who became president of Telemeter.

RKO THEATRES celebrated its diamond anniversary in 1962 with 75 years of showmanship under various corporate names. During the Anniversary celebration, RKO Theatres President Harry Mandel set forth the idea of greater grosses through greater number of patrons; the circuit held an anniversary contest, first place of which went to Jack Reis, manager of the RKO Fordham, New York for the in-town managers and to William Hastings of the RKO Orpheum, Denver for out-of-town managers. A program of renovating was carried out.

STANLEY WARNER was in one of the big buys of the year when it acquired the 37 theatre Lone Star Theatre circuit in Texas. Gross income for the fiscal year ended Aug. 25, 1962, rose to $136,150,500 an increase of $1,429,800 over the $134,720,700 reported for the prior year. The net, however, was $2,853,-500 compared with $4,301,800 of the previous fiscal year. SW extended its diversifiication by acquiring 50 per cent of the Physicians Products Co. to merge it with another SW corporation, Tailby Nason Co.

THE MUNDANE GLAMOR that surrounds Cleopatra in history, drama, and fiction, too often hides the fact that she was as poisonous to those who were connected with her as that equally historic asp. To 20th Century-Fox she meant distress from which management expects to wreak victory at the box office.

As the year endel "Cleopatra" publicity in the past and in the present was being used to build what 20th expects to be the biggest box office that any picture has ever experienced.

But the misfortunes that dogged filming of the spectacle (illness of star Elizabeth Taylor, problems of logistics, weather and the like) created prophets of doom and dissatisfied stockholders, who made their feelings felt in a frequently strident stockholders' meeting this past May. President Spyros P. Skouras met the dissidents with soft speech and came away with a decisive victory for management. However Skouras' health put a brake on his efforts and led to new management with a round of changes.

On July 25th the 20th-Fox Board met for four hours, elected Skouras chairman of the board; elected Darryl F. Zanuck to the presidency which Skouras had held, enlarged the board from 11 to 15 members by adding William Wyler, Zanuck and Attorney Arnold Grant; accepted the resignation of Judge Samuel I. Rosenmann, who had been brought in by Skouras as board chairman in May.

For the company it was a year of change. Edmund H. Reek, who had headed Fox Movietone News, retired, and was succeeded by W. R. Higgenbotham. Peter Levathes, who headed the Fox studios, was replaced by Richard Zanuck, and the studios, which were shut down by the President, Darryl F. Zanuck, gave promise of being reopened in 1963. Seymour Poe replaced Glen Norris as sales chief and began making changes on a world wide basis (see Distribution).

Jerome Edwards of the law firm of Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin Krim and Ballon, succeeded Otto Koegel, retired, as general counsel. Harry J. McIntyre, of the law firm of Royal, Koegel and Rogers, associated with 20th for 23 years, was elected secretary, an office which was vacant since Donald H. Henderson was promoted to financial vice-president, a new post. Succeeding Henderson, who had also been treasurer, to the office of treasurer, was assistant treasurer Francis T. Kelly. Fred Hift was appointed by Zanuck to be director of advertising and publicity for Great Britain, Europe and the Mideast. Charles Einfeld retired as vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity and exploitation. There was no immediate replacement. Harold Rand became head of publicity. Joseph Sugar was appointed to a new post—roadshow manager. Adam Gimbel, head of the Gimbel department stores, New York, was appointed to the board.

And Attorney Arnold Grant was named chairman of the executive committee, in which post he received the assignment of studying 20th-Fox operations with a view to recommending economies.

The company showed a loss for the 39 weeks ended Sept. 29, 1962 of $16,816,241, or about $5,000,000 more than management had anticipated. The loss for the comparable 38 weeks in 1961 was $11,544,007.

UNITED ARTISTS, which came up with an innovation that threatened a revolution with its "Premiere Showcase" (See Distribution) starting with the "Road to Hong Kong," announced a schedule of 70 features over a three-year period. The company, which is already interested in theatres through the

CORPORATE: ACTIVITIES ARE VARIED

Astor and Victoria in New York, got together with The Mirisch Co. to close a deal reportedly involving $5,000,000 with Fred Stein's Statewide Theatres by which UA and the Mirisches sought a substantial interest in the 30-theatre circuit.

During the year Fred Goldberg and Herbert T. Shottenfeld were elected vice-presidents, David Chasman was elevated from the post of ad manager to executive ad director and Vince Coleman, formerly assistant publicity manager was named coordinator of exploitation.

United Artists also announced that two of its producers had plans to use Cinerama for "It's A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" and "The Greatest Story Ever Told."

Net for the first nine months of 1962 was the highest in the 43 years of the company's existence—$3,103,000 compared to the net of $3,014,000 for the nine months of 1961.

THROUGH A CONSENT DECREE by which it gave up its talent agency business Music Corporation of America obtained court permission to purchase Decca Records and Universal, thereby bringing the company that was founded by Carl Laemle under still another owner, during the year when Universal celebrated its 50th anniversary as a film maker and a film seller.

Milton R. Rackmil, remains president of both Decca and Universal and becomes vice board chairman of MCA.

At a dinner where he was named Motion Picture Pioneer of the Year, Rackmil urged "optimism, courage and above all, fight." He is a disciple of all three and he has firm ground to be optimistic for Universal's net earnings for the 26 weeks ended April 28, 1862, were $3,371,647 compared to $1,835,322 for the 26 weeks of 1961. Further, Universal estimated that its domestic business was up 71 per cent and its foreign business up 50 per cent, while the studio was going at full blast employing between 3,100 and 3,200.

Universal revised its film contracts during the year requiring cut price tickets and passes to be accounted for as well as receipts from drive-in car heaters.

WARNER BROS. again proved the truth of an old truth—that a picture given enthusiastic support by exhibition and extra help by its distributor, will give a good, or even great account of itself.

At the request of the Theatre Owners of America, a request accompanied by a promise of strong exhibitor support, Warner Bros. took "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane," scheduled for early 1963 release, and made it available on a multiple run basis to exhibit in November as what TOA termed a "Hollywood Preview Engagement" picture.

Warner spent about $300,000 in launching the film nationally; the exhibitors put their minds and their muscles to work. The result was that by mid-November, "Baby" which had low negative cost, cost over $800,000, had run up $2,000,000 box office and confidently expected to do $4,000,000.

Warner's net for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31 was $7,566,000 compared to $7,209,000 for fiscal 1961. During early July, 1962, Morey Goldstein, former general sales manager of Allied Artists assumed the post of sales head at Warner, succeeding Charles Boasberg who went to Paramount.

THERE WAS A WIDE RANGE of activity on other corporate fronts with Sidney Markley resigning as vice-president of AB-PT to become A.C.E. films president. The object of this exhibitor-financed company is to increase the amount of product but what action it has taken in this direction is the best guarded secret of the year, though it is throught to have invested in "55 Days to Peking."

Three very determined men — Max E. Youngstein, who was with Cinerama; Jerome Pickman, who was with Paramount, and Charles Simonelli, who was with Universal—all resigned their jobs and got together to form the Entertainment Corp. of America. The company announced deals with Robert Mitchum, with Bobby Darin (for four pictures, and additional packages.

Desilu, which has plans for theatrical features changed its name to Cari. Ely Landau announced plans for five features with "The Fool Killer" as first. Dino De Laurentiis set up Dino De Laurentiis Corp. under Ralph Serpe to handle production in America. Trans-Lux elected Richard Brandt president and planned to spend $2,800,000 in entertainment projects including a new theatre in New York, as well as in distribution and television.

The Mirisch Co. plans to make 20 in two years at a cost of $6,500,000.

Seven Arts acquired the Trans Canada Distributing Enterprises of Toronto. Seven Arts' net for the fiscal year ended June 30, was $3,466,293, compared to $2,655,371 for the previous fiscal year.

Walter Reade, Inc. and Sterling Television merged to form Walter Reade-Sterling which will engage in the field of theatres, theatrical films, television films, concessions, etc. Reade-Sterling's theatrical distribution arm, Continental Distributing, set up a subsidiary in London to distribute films and finance production.

Director Blake Edwards and Producer Martin Jurow formed G&E Productions to make five productions with "The Pink Panther" as their first.

J. Arthur Rank resigned as chairman of the Rank Organization, Ltd., to be succeeded by Deputy chairman John Davis. Rank is now the president.

Leo Samuels joined Colorama as world sales vice-president; Norbert T. Auerbach was named United Artist continental manager to succeed Eric Pleskow who was elevated to a vice-presidency and Harry Goldstone left a sales post in Astor to become general sales manager of Zenith International. Benjamin Goldstone was named general manager Seneca International. Leon Roth and Irving Hershner joined hands as Roth-Hershner to produce theatrical films.

On the financial side MCA reported a net for six months ended June 30, 1962 of $6,631,000, compared to a net of $4,800,000 in the same period of 1961. Walt Disney, net for the nine months ended June 30, 1962 was $3,452,223 compared to $2,373,083 for the same period in 1962. And Motion Picture Investors, formed to encourage more production, reported net assets of $330,870.21 as of Nov. 30, 1962, with the larger part of the assets in film stocks.

LABOR

LABOR STILL SUFFERED from the slack in Hollywood production and the desire to do something about it demonstrated itself in concessions to encourage production at home such as were granted George Stevens for "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and to agitation for some action against runaway production. As 1962 ended there appeared to be the possibility of a remedy to the runaway situation through the cooperation of management and the assistance of the U.S. Government.

Difficulties between labor and employer were few and relatively mild. In Kankakee, Ill., projectionists were back in their booths and the towns' two theatres were in full operation as a new agreements was reached. In New York, threat of a film delivery stoppage did not materialize as Local 817, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and the film carriers shook hands on a deal. In Detroit, Allied Theatres of Michigan, Cooperative Theatres of Michigan and the Building Service Employes International Union, Local 79, reached an agreement calling for union shop, a nine-cent an hour rise and arbitration of disputes, among other things. In Los Angeles, a peculiar situation blossomed as the Service and Maintenance Employes' Union, Local 399, AFL-CIO picketed the Huntington Hartford Theatre over grievances but did not ask other employes not to pass its picket lines so that IATSE projectionists were able to project "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

In several areas IA projectionists were reported to have an eye set on a 35-hour week but no crises appeared to develop. In New York a labor controversy of years ended as the Independent Motion Picture Machine Operators and Television Employes' Union dissolved and its members were absorbed into Local 306, IATSE. In New York too, the IATSE East Coast Council and the Film Producers Assn. of New York reached an agreement providing for collective bargaining with the FPA.

INTERNATIONAL

THE INTERNATIONAL SCENE was spotted with problems during 1962, as film men in the Common Market (Italy, France, West Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Netherlands) studied the possibilities of establishing a free flow of films among the Common Market countries.

But while these moves foreshadowed interesting possibilities for this group, they did not overshadow the growing problem of television in Europe, or the problems of costs facing producers everywhere.

Italy seemed, with its subsidies, to have the best climate for production, and for co-production. There was a boom in Spain based largely on the activities there of Samuel Bronston. But in contrast, production in France and Germany suffered severe blows. In Germany, UFA suspended its theatrical film production and German production generally wanted subsidies to be raised by a five per cent tax on the box office, a suggestion that met with no favor on the part of exhibition.

In the United Kingdom tests of Toll TV were given the go ahead signal despite exhibitor opposition. As to free TV, the British Film Industry Defense Organizations bought up 10 years product in first and second features to keep them from free TV. Efforts were also made unsuccessfully to raise the quota of screen time that must be accorded British films from 30 to 40 per cent.

South Africa, which the U. S. looks upon as a coming film market, planned to increase film subsidies. Tax officials there looked with a disapproving eye on efforts of certain drive-in exhibitors to have a parking charge separate from the general admission with the idea that they wouldn't pay admission tax on the parking charge.

FILM FESTIVALS

By EDWARD LIPTON
FILM DAILY Staff Writer

THE YEAR 1962 was one of fuller participation and growing prestige for the United States in international film festival circles. This was evident in terms of U.S. films shown at the various festivals, in the number of U.S. film personalities who attended and in the reception received by American films and the awards they garnered.

Selection of films to be shown is now made by a committee representing the four Hollywood creative guilds, the Screen Producers Guild, Directors Guild of America, Writers Guild of America and Screen Actors Guild. The plan was devised by George Stevens, Jr., as director of the Motion Picture Service of the United States Information Agency.

The committee, which began functioning with the Cannes Festival in 1962, consisted of Walter Mirisch and John Houseman of the SPG, Fred Zinnemann and Willis Holdbeck, DGA, Charles Schnee and Allen Rivkin, WGA and Gene Kelly and Richard Widmark, SAG.

The 1963 Guilds Festival Committee consists of the same members as the 1962 group with one substitution, Ernest Lehman for Schnee as a representative of The Writer's Guild.

The '63 group was charged with making selections for six festivals, Mar del Plata, Cannes, Moscow, Berlin, Edinburgh and Venice.

For the first time in 1962, the United States was represented at the international festival at Karlovy Vary. While "Hemingway's Adventures of A Young Man" was the only American film among 29 features from 26 countries, the showing was a complete sell-out with crowds turned away, and an additional 3,500 people were accommodated at an unprecedented second showing.

Acting awards were received by Americans at Cannes, Berlin and Venice, San Sebastian. American films and/or their principals were also among the top prize winners at Locarno and San Francisco. U.S. entries received citations at Edinburgh.

Furthermore, top American industry figures were on hand at many of these events as members of the U.S. delegations, as judges, as observers, as visitors.

James Stewart served as chairman of the U.S. delegation at Berlin. Frank Capra repped the U.S. at Karlovy Vary. George Stevens, Jr. headed the Cannes contingent, with Mel Ferrer serving on the international jury. At Edinburgh the Honorable Myron Cowen, former ambassador to Australia, Belgium and the Philippines, chaired the American delegation. At Venice were delegation head George Stevens, Jr., with Arnold M. Grant, Jennifer Jones and screenwriter Ivan Moffat as members. John Houseman served as U.S. member of the jury.

Stewart on his return from Berlin asserted, "I reccommend that every effort be made . . . . to impress the American film industry with the importance of top grade U.S. film representation at the Berlin Film Festival." Other reps voiced similar sentiments.

George Stevens, Jr. pointed out that these events are important to our Government as well as to the motion picture industry. He noted that in addition to being international trade fairs important to commercial distribution and to the exchange of knowledge and techniques, these exhibitions "are significant diplomatic and cultural events which see many nations represented by prominent artists and government officials."

Stevens was strong in his praise of the efforts by executives of the major film companies to make a success of the 1962 season. He expressed great satisfaction with the work of the Hollywood Guilds Committee that selected festival entries, stating this method of selection to have been extremely productive."

Through the contributions of internationally known leaders of the motion picture industry, the United States realized in part the public relations potential of diplomatic representatives from the cinema, "well informed and articulate about their country," Stevens pointed out.

He noted that the Committee selections represented the best in American film-making available for showing this year under the various eligibility regulations established by festival authors.

Edward R. Murrow, director of the United States Information Agency sent letters of appreciation to the Guild Committee members and concurred in estimates of the importance of continued and improved American participation.

The outlook for stronger U.S. participation and showings in film festivals is distinctly upbeat.

Here at home, Capra, in his report to the Secretary of State, recommended that a major international film festival be held in the United States, specifically in Washington or Hollywood. A similar recommendation had been made previously by Screen Producers Guild President Walter Mirisch and Fred Zinneman of the DGA after their return from official events at Cannes.

There was a flurry of activity at setting up a festival for Hollywood, but these plans are still unresolved. There is a much stronger possibility of a Motion Picture Association sponsored festival in Washington for the Spring of 1965. U.S. participation at the San Francisco Festival continued on a comparatively minor plane.

A very solid development here came with the very recent announcement that the Lincoln Center of Performing Arts and the Museum of Modern Art of New York have scheduled the first New York international film festival Sept. 10-19, 1963. The event will be presented in association with the British Film Institute, whose festival organizer, Richard Roud, is selecting the films to be shown here. The festival will be non-competitive, with no juries or prizes. Emphasis will be on the films themselves, most of them chosen from among the best shown at other festivals.

Both U.S. Customs and New York State have waived censorship jurisdiction over films entering the United States for the New York Festival. (Customs also waives inspection for the San Francisco Film Festival). The Customs ruling is with the provision that the films are returned to their country of origin after the festival.

The New York Board of Regents, under which state censorship functions, decided that the festival as a non-profit and cultural institution was beyond its jurisdiction.

Concurrent with the exhibition of new films will be a showing of old films twice daily in the auditorium of the Museum of Modern Art. The program, to be selected by Richard Griffith, curator of the Museum's Film Library, will be made up of 10 films of the past decade which have never been seen in New York.

Eric Johnston, MPAA president has approved the festival and many top industry names are on the sponsoring committee.

Cannes opened the 1962 international film festival cycle on the European Continent with its XV event, May 7-21. There were 33 films entered from 26 countries.

The Golden Palm award for Best Picture went to Brazil's "O Pagador de Promessas" (The Given Word). Directed by Anselmo Duarte, the film was only his second full-length directing venture.

In an unusual acting awards decision, Sir Ralph Richardson, Jason Robards Jr., Dean Stockwell and Katherine Hepburn of the official U.S. entry, Ely Landau's "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and Rita Tushingham and Murray Melvin of the official British entry, "A Taste of Honey" (Continental Distributing) shared acting honors. The jury explained its unusual prize-awarding decision as "an effort to recompense . . . the homogeneity of the two performances rather than individual successes." The awarding added to U.S. laurels in the acting category, this country having captured 12 acting awards in the previous 14 years.

Special Jury Awards were shared by Italy's "L'Eclisse" (The Eclipse) directed by Michelangelo Antonioni and France's "Le Process de Jeanne d'Arc." The film, directed by Robert Bresson, was also awarded the Roman Catholic Film Office prize.

"Divorce, Italian Style" (Embassy Pictures) was named Best Comedy at Cannes and the

The XXIII International Film Festival was held Aug. 2-Sept. 8.

In handing out the various film prizes, the judges commented on the absence of "exceptional films" but noted "with pleasure the presence of a large group of worthy films by new film authors."

The Golden Lion of St. Mark was shared by two films in 1962, "Childhood of Ivan" (Russia) directed by Andrev Tarkovski; and "Family Diary" (Italy) directed by Valerio Zurlini.

The Russian film was termed by the jury a "lyric representation of the drama of a child against the face of war," while the Italian film was lauded for its "evocative strength of sentiments filtered through memory."

A Count Volpi Cup went to Burt Lancaster as Best Actor in the U.S. entry "Bird Man of Alcatraz." The film, directed by John Frankenheimer, also won the San Giorgio prize. Lancaster received a citation for the "sobriety and majesty of his work." Emanuela Riva won the Volpi Cup for Best Actress for her performance in "Therese des Queyroux."

A special jury prize went to "To Live Her Life," directed by Jean-Luc Godard. Picture also won the Italian Film Critics prize for Best Foreign Film.

Both the City of Venice prize and the Cineforum award went to "Family Diary."

The Roman Catholic Film Office Prize was won by Britain's "Term of Trial." The Italian Film Critics award, the Cinema 60, went to "A Man for Burning."

EXHIBITION

By LOUIS PELEGRINE
FILM DAILY Staff Writer

THE product shortage last year continued to be the number-one problem confronting exhibition in this country. Close behind it in importance ranked pay television.

As perhaps never before exhibition showed a United front in efforts to find solutions to these two problems in particular.

The pay-television situation provided possibly the best example of how closely united exhibition can stand when it faces what is felt to be a common peril.

In mid-July Prsident John H. Stembler of Theatre Owners of America and President Marshall H. Fine of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors joined in calling upon the presidents of the major companies to make known their firms' policies on serving film to pay television. As an announcement issued by TOA noted, the action was "an unprecedented cooperative effort by the two national exhibitor organizations."

The move was said to demonstrate "the deep concern of Allied and TOA that the film companies might be considering serving film to the Hartford Phonevision or any other future pay-TV test on a first-run or subsequent-run availability in competition with theatres." Stembler and Fine asked each company head to inform them of his firm's "present and future policy" on the servicing of product to pay video.

As a follow-up to this action Stembler and Fine at the end of August personally took the TOA-Allied case against pay TV to the Department of Justice when they met in Washington with Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy. The two exhibitor leaders conferred also with other Department of Justice representatives on the pay-TV issue. In setting forth the TOA-Allied position on toll video they voiced the opinion that "sales to pay TV are economic suicide for the film companies."

Philip F. Harling, chairman of the Joint Committee on Pay-TV, spoke for all exhibition when he served notice that exhibitors would conduct a "last-ditch" fight up to the U. S. Supreme Court in a bid to overturn the Arkansas Supreme Court ruling which without dissent upheld action favoring the Midwest Video Corp.'s pay-TV test in Little Rock. Hopes to defeat pay TV were pinned on legislation and delaying actions backed by "a concentrated grass-roots campaign" directed to every member of Congress.

Among other battles TOA and Allied fought in a common interest were those against censorship in whatever form, the application of minimum-wage provisions to theatre help and the disorderly release of motion pictures.

TOA extended itself to the limits in its attempt to encourage the making of more films. In mid-February, at a New York meeting marking the resumption of liaison between it and the Screen Producers Guild which was started by the two organizations in 1959. TOA advanced a proposal providing for the creation of a fund to insure the individual producer against loss. TOA explained that "a percentage of any profits" from pictures guaranteed against loss "would go back into the fund." The proposal was said to have met with "the immediate and enthusiastic reaction of the producer representatives at the meeting." A subcommittee was named by the TOA liaison committee to develop the proposal.

At its Midwinter board and executive committee meeting a month later TOA gave further consideration to the proposal. While the fund idea was considered meritorious and something to be investigated, there were reservations that if TOA undertook such a program by itself it might conflict with A.C.E. Films, and it was decided to make the offer to A.C.E. first.

EXHIBITION: LOOKS AT EADY PLAN

The TOA board and executive committee voted at their annual meeting preceding the annual convention in Miami Beach in November to look into the feasibility of establishing an American Eady-type plan on a voluntary basis as an answer to the product shortage. Herman M. Levy, TOA's general counsel, was designated as a committee of one to investigate whether the British plan was adaptable in this country.

The board and executive committee acted after hearing reports on the Eady plan by Ellis Pinkney, general secretary of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, and Glasgow exhibitor George Singleton, past president of the CEA. Levy was instructed to report to the board and executive committee at their 1963 Midwinter meeting.

TOA in May carried its battle for more product to the exhibitors of the United Kingdom when President Stembler in a message to the annual CEA conference in Bournemouth, England, called upon the British exhibitor group to join in "our common problem" of working to encourage new production and ease the product shortage.

TOA registered a signal victory in the fight for orderly distribution of product throughout the year when a "Hollywood Preview Engagement" merchandising plan designed to meet the product needs of the nation's theatres during the off-seasons was launched by it late in August with the cooperation of Warner Bros. The plan's initial film was WB's "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?," the release of which the company agreed to advance from February, 1963, to Nov. 3, 1962.

TOA exulted in the fact that "the nation's leading circuits and independents, representing the overwhelming majority of theatres throughout the United States, are combining forces for the first time to put all their resources behind this new exhibition policy." It was believed the plan would spark "a revolutionary change in film distribution that will guarantee the presentation of the most important films during the entire year and not only in the Summer or holiday seasons." The feeling was that success of the plan would strengthen TOA's hand in seeking similar arrangements with other companies to help relieve the product shortage in the so-called "orphan" periods.

The TOA board and executive committee at their Midwinter meeting reaffirmed "unequivocal adherence to the Production Code and to the principle that the motion picture medium is entitled to the full protection offered by the Federal Constitution." They also pledged "to continue and expand" TOA's film content informational service so that it might become "an even more valuable tool to theatre owners."

Speaking for exhibitors, President Stembler of TOA "heartily" commended the Screen Actors Guild for its "decision to waive any demands for wage increases or changes in working conditions as a means of stimulating the production of Hollywood films."

TOA gained strength when the Independent Exhibitors of New England and Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania affiliated with it to boost to 29 the number of its state and regional units. The New England group had been unaffiliated since its withdrawal from Allied States in 1959 on the charge that Allied no longer was properly representing the independent theatre men. The Pennsylvania group was a brand-new one formed by exhibitors representing more than 200 circuits and independent houses in the state.

Stembler won unanimous election to a second term as TOA president. All other officers also were held over.

Allied States under the dynamic leadership of President Marshall H. Fine and Executive Director Milton H. London continued to make forward strides in efforts to improve the lot of the nation's small and independent theatre owners. The progressive and realistic program laid down under the new deal established when Fine and London took over the reins of national Allied was being forcefully applied.

A hint of Allied States' forward-looking policy was seen in a four-point program for the industry offered by Ben Marcus, board chairman and former president of the national exhibitor organization. The program called for less concentration on "blockbusters" and more on "good, solid box-office pictures," research and development of presentation techniques, research and development in marketing pictures to the public and theatre modernization.

London let it be known that national Allied's future vigilance on trade practices and exhibitor-distributor relations would be on a continuing basis and his organization would be prepared for action "the year round," not merely in exceptional cases such as the dispute with M-G-M over "King of Kings" adjustments. At the same time London indicated that "the old days" when Allied blasted the major distributors on general principles were a thing of the past.

EXHIBITION: ASKS ORDERLY RELEASE

The year witnessed agitation in the Allied ranks for the creation of film buying and booking offices by regional units in areas where they did not already exist. The idea was suggested by Marcus on the grounds it would greatly help exhibitors in having pictures bought and booked properly and in obtaining prints more expeditiously. The proposal was inspired by complaints about the elimination of salesmen and the selling of pictures my mail. A committee was set up to study the feasibility of the idea.

The Allied States board was given a mandate by the membership "to explore the feasibility of informing and educating stockholders of the major distributing companies concerning policies detrimental to their interest and to encourage individual Allied members to become stockholders in the distributing companies and empower the board of Allied or any member or members to represent such stockholders by duly authorized proxies at any company stockholders' meeting." This lead to a movement among the Allied rank and file to acquire stock in the film companies.

Following the example of TOA, Allied moved to look into the feasibility of a voluntary Eady-type plan to assist American film production to the end that more pictures might be produced.

The national Allied board voted to turn to the Department of Justice to prevent the use of product in the Hartford Phonevision pay-TV test day-and-date with the first run. President Fine was assigned the job of asking the department to permit the national exhibitor organization to request distributors not to make product available for the test in competition with the first run.

Deterioration of distribution patterns of the major companies to a point where they "are operating almost as a black market situation" with "millions of dollars going down the drain" because of the holding back of pictures was charged by Allied. The distributors were seen growing "bolder and bolder" in their dealings with exhibitors and moving "closer and closer to illegality," to quote Irving Dollinger, a national Allied director.

While Allied conceded the distributors had provided some relief in the roadshow situation it saw still further improvement possible. It strongly criticized the flooring of percentage terms. In demanding the orderly release of films on a year-long basis Allied contended it would be more profitable to distributors and exhibitors alike.

Allied was committed by its board to fighting the censorship battle at the local level in the belief the problem could best be tackled locally through the regional units.

Marshall Fine was replaced as national Allied president at the annual board meeting in December by Jack Armstrong of the Armstrong Circuit of Ohio when he declined to be named for a third term. He succeeded Marcus as board chairman.

For the first time in Allied's history the board established an executive committee to act in an advisory capacity to the president. Named to the group were three former presidents—Fine, Marcus and Wilbur Snaper.

Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota rejoined Allied States "premarily in recognition of what national Allied has done in the last year," in the words of Neal Houtz, the unit's president. The group disaffiliated in 1961 over dissatisfaction with the way the national organization was representing the small exhibitors.

A committee "to explore the possibility of an intense audience research project for the benefiit of all exhibition" was created by the American Congress of Exhibitors in mid-July. Emanuel Frisch was elected to a second term as chairman of ACE.

Sidney M. Markley was named president of A.C.E. Films, production company financed, owned and directed by exhibitors. He resigned as vice-president of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres to take the post.

Robert K. Shapiro, managing director of the Paramount Theatre in New York, was made president of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, succeeding Emanuel Frisch. Leslie R. Schwartz, head of Century Theatres, was named board chairman.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York took a poke at distribution when it unanimously went on record against alleged encouragement of competitive bidding by the distributors and the creation of extra runs via special releasing patterns for certain films. It threatened to take "such other appropriate steps as may be deemed necessary for the protection of ITOA members."

THE LABOR SCENE

"RUNAWAY" PRODUCTION in 1962 remained the most controversial subject in the realm of motion picture labor. No less a burning issue than it was in 1961, it brought new outcries from the industry's labor ranks as the production of American pictures abroad showed little sign of abatement. New efforts were made to find a solution to the vexing problem, but by the end of the year still none had been found.

In mid-April the industry's joint labor-management committee on "runaway" production came up with a six-point cooperative program which it hoped might provide the answer to the problem. The program called for:

1. A change in the current Small Business Administration policy against making loans to communications industries.

2. Joint support of proposed federal legislation to limit tax exemptions for Americans living abroad to $20,000 per year for the first three years and $35,000 per year thereafter.

3. Support for federal legislation to permit the spread of income over a period of years for persons engaged in occupations such as acting in which maximum earning power is relatively brief and often spasmodic. It was hoped such legislation would cause popular stars to make more films.

4. Support for measures designed to reduce extravagant tax-free expense allowances enjoyed by creative personnel living abroad.

5. Efforts through appropriate agencies to remove unfair trade barriers and competitive disadvantages handicapping American production.

6. A cooperative analysis of cost differentials between Hollywood and foreign centers.

The program was the outcome of a series of joint meetings between representatives of labor and management which began Feb. 1.

The "runaway" production issue grew hotter as the year wore on. At the IATSE's biennial convention in Las Vegas in September the rank and file issued a clear mandate to President Richard F. Walsh to push for curtailment of overseas production by American film makers. Four resolutions on the subject were referred to Walsh by the delegates "for implementation" in what was said to be the strongest action ever taken by the IATSE membership on the issue. The resolutions went so far as to call for federal government action to curb "runaway" production, which was charged with depriving American film workers of jobs.

The convention urged a boycott of television sponsors who turn out their filmed programs abroad when they could be made in the states with American labor.

President Eric Johnston of the MPAA assured the IATSE he was ready to use his most vigorous efforts in Washington to implement joint labor-management proposals designed to increase American film production and provide more jobs.

These proposals, backed by the Hollywood AFL Film Council, called for both federal legislation and negotiations through appropriate agencies to remove unfair overseas trade barriers and competitive disadvantages handicapping American production.

In his biennial report presented at the IATSE convention Walsh accused the government's film industry consent decree of being a major cause of unemployment and demanded that it be reviewed and modified. He served notice that local unions as well as the international would move on the Department of Justice, the Congress and President Kennedy with demands for modification of the decree.

Walsh promised an all-out organizing drive to bring non-union theatre and studio employes into the IATSE fold. A special IATSE committee was set up to formulate a concrete plan to achieve this objective.

At the convention the IATSE went on record for a shorter work week in line with AFL-CIO President George Meany's earlier proposal for a 35-hour week.

The convention witnessed the election of Walsh to another term as IATSE president, a post filled by him unbrokenly since 1941.

In the middle of May an appeal was made to President Kennedy to declare the Hollywood motion picture industry a "distressed area" and "to issue such executive orders and directives as are necessary to alleviate the hardship to American citizens in all categories and classifications of the motion picture industry." It came from three IATSE studio unions—Local 728, electrical technicians; Local 659, cameramen, and Local 80, grips. The appeal was directed against the filming of American films abroad.

The IATSE enlisted in a movement to establish a common bond among those employed in show business throughout the Western Hemisphere when its general executive board approved its affiliation with the new-born Inter-American Federation of Entertainment Workers. President Walsh was said by the board to have recommended the move in the belief that "the establishment of strong fraternal ties among entertainment workers in all parts of the hemisphere would be beneficial to those of this country in various ways." He was elected president of the new organization, headquarters of which were established in Mexico City.

The Screen Actors Guild did its bit to provide "more motion picture production and more jobs for actors in this country" by announcing that in negotations for a new theatrical picture contract to replace the one due to expire Jan. 31, 1963, it would "not ask for any raises in wage rates nor any changes in working conditions if such changes would increase the cost of hiring actors in American films."

That Hollywood's joint talent committee on "runaway" production had petitioned the U.S. State Department to work toward the elimination of subsidies to American companies producing abroad, of quotas favoring pictures produced overseas and of restrictions against American films was disclosed by John L. Dales, the SAG's national executive secretary.

Motion picture labor had an interest at stake in the minimum-wage battle in which theatre men were involved last year.

In New York State theatre owners appealed the refusal of the state's General Minimum Wage Board to exempt "young and old" employes from minimums set up under the new law. They sought a hearing on the matter.

The exhibition business in the New York area in January found itself faced with a solid front by projection booth labor when Independent Motion Picture Machine Operators & Television Employes, Inc., was dissolved and its membership absorbed by Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, Local 306, IATSE. —L.P.

COMPO'S ASSIGNMENTS

WITH ITS CUSTOMARY ALERTNESS the Council of Motion Picture Organizations last year kept on top of all issues that threatened harm to the motion picture business. It was tireless in fighting fires believed likely to scorch the industry and continued to push ahead with proposals calculated to benefit motion pictures.

Censorship still remained the severest threat battled by COMPO. The council was kept on the go slapping down the apostles of censorship and pointing up the danger of placing restrictions upon the film industry from without.

COMPO: REVIVES AUDIENCE AWARDS

COMPO battled the classification of films as strenuously as it did out-and-out censorship. It viewed classification as nothing more than another form of censorship.

At its annual meeting in November the council voted to pursue a campaign to educate the public to the fact that censorship and moves to establish censorship curtail its basic liberties. It was hoped that such a campaign would prevent the establishment of censorship in certain areas and render easier the task of repealing censorship laws where they existed.

A proposal to study the situation with regard to seeking full repeal of the federal admission tax, which now applies to tickets priced at more than $1, was adopted at the annual meeting. It was recommended that COMPO take measures necessary to seek repeal of the tax. The suggestion was offered that, if the repeal effort were made, a national tax advisory committee consisting of industry leaders from each state be named to aid the tax committee.

The program adopted at the annual meeting also provided that the tax committee be instructed to present "the industry viewpoint" to Congress should attempts be made to eliminate the exemption of theatre employes from the provisions of the federal minimum wage laws.

The program further called for the resumption of assistance to the Academy Awards program by working through exhibition to promote the "Oscar" telecast. COMPO had withdrawn from the awards promotion when the MPAA ceased to sponsor the "Oscar" TV show and private industry took over the sponsorship.

Appointment of a committee to study how COMPO could cooperate with the industry to increase production and to look into Great Britain's Eady plan for stimulating film-making was also voted.

It was additionally decided to study a plan that would allow audiences to nominate and choose candidates for best picture, actor and actress and for "America's most exciting new male star" in a national campaign conducted through theatres and the press. Envisioned was a sponsored TV network show on which the audience awards would be presented. It was stipulated that receipts after the deduction of campaign costs be donated to the Hollywood Motion Picture and Television Museum, which would provide the talent.

The annual COMPO meeting also witnessed the reelection of all three members of the governing committee—Ben Marcus, representing the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors; Samuel Pinanski, representing the Theatre Owners of America, and Vice-President Eugene Picker of United Artists, representing distribution. Picker had been named to the COMPO triumvirate in May by the MPAA to fill the vacancy caused by the death of A. Montague.

A week after the annual COMPO session the council's tax committee started the machinery rolling for full elimination of the admission tax. It voted to survey the U. S. in an effort to find out how many movie houses were subject to the tax and what revenues the levy produced annually. It also set up tax repeal committees in the 50 states and 435 Congressional districts.

The next step in the campaign to obtain relief from the federal admission tax came in December when a call went out for information deemed vital to the waging of the drive for Congressional support. The appeal was broadcast by COMPO's national tax campaign committee to theatres charging admissions of more than $1.05. The theatres were asked to report to Price Waterhouse on the amount of federal admission tax paid in the year ended Sept. 30, 1962, and on the number of houses paying the impost.

The action was taken by the committee on the premise that "before we even approach Congressmen to request their aid in this endeavor it is absolutely necessary that we have authentic information as to (1) the total amount of tax money paid by theatres and (2) the number of theatres paying this tax for the year ended Sept. 30, 1962."

Continuance of MPAA support of COMPO was voted by the association's board of directors in October. The move provided assurance that the MPAA would continue to help finance COMPO by matching dollar for dollar the amount contributed by exhibition. It also cleared the way for COMPO to start soliciting dues from exhibtion since it had always been considered impracticable to solicit theatre men until distribution had committed itself.

A month later it was announced by COMPO it would begin its drive to collect dues from exhibitors, its first in 27 months, in January of this year.

The COMPO film merchandising plan, originally fathered by Ben Marcus of the council's governing committee, found expanded use during the year when it was put to work in New England, where it met with great success.

HOLLYWOOD

By WILLIAM ORNSTEIN
West Coast Editor, THE FILM DAILY

AFTER THREATENING CLOUDS and grim visages at many studios for more than six months, Hollywood again is wearing a HAPPY FACE. No one can gainsay the fact thousands of professional and technical craftsmen experienced grave doubts as to the future of their "invested" years in the industry when 20th-Fox shut tight its stages for eight months to reorganize its fiscal position, or when M-G-M for the first time in many moons didn't have a feature in work at the Culver City lot.

But this is in the past. Both studios are covered by sunny skies these days as each bounced back with a schedule of production continuity which called for resumption of activity on a one-a-month basis, then stepping up to two and possibly three new pictures every 30 days.

Another favorable factor to pay off in the future is the renewed pleas by numerous unions, supported by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, to put an end to the state levy in March on negatives at the studios. IATSE and Basic Crafts workers claimed at Sacramento hearings recently the first four months of the year are the blackest for their members, studios (in the main) refusing to start new pictures in California during the taxable period. This situation will be resolved, of necessity, for the benefit of the worker as well as the state's coffers.

Production unquestionably is on the rebound, which is the important thing. There will be more and more as time goes on accompanied by other problems for the sachems in New York to solve. One of the greatest of these is costs versus economics.

There isn't a fissure of doubt the studios want to produce more quality films. To do this requires multi-million dollar budgets. There always will be a few "sleepers," under a half million or slightly above this figure, but these are the exceptions. Hence, the main difficulty is where will the multi-million dollar films come from unless there is a wider spread of sources to be tapped for income? It is not new that expensive pictures cannot survive on domestic returns alone. The solution is only in opening new markets abroad, and this is what the industry through Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association, is aiming to accomplish.

There are 11 countries where he is trying to make agreements for exchange of money for American-Made films, he reported to the presidents of member companies meeting in Hollywood recently. This is not an overnight task, but bearing in mind Johnston has accomplished miracles in certain foreign directions one can expect him to come up with cheerful news of diminishing the holdouts in time to come. The ultimate effect, when new countries fall into line, is obvious: more revenue for the guiding forces in New York to allow for production.

Yet, on the other hand, countries like Italy and Spain have been pitching the woo to step up American production in their studios. There have also been other countries with the same idea and, again "because of necessity," as explained recently by IATSE president Richard F. Walsh, some pictures must be made abroad. Now, it appears, satellite Yugoslavia has made proposals to American picture makers for subsidies, etc., which found several attracted to the magnetic sound. However, the handful of pictures already listed for filming there have yet to be seen, shipped to these shores and evaluated for final reckoning.

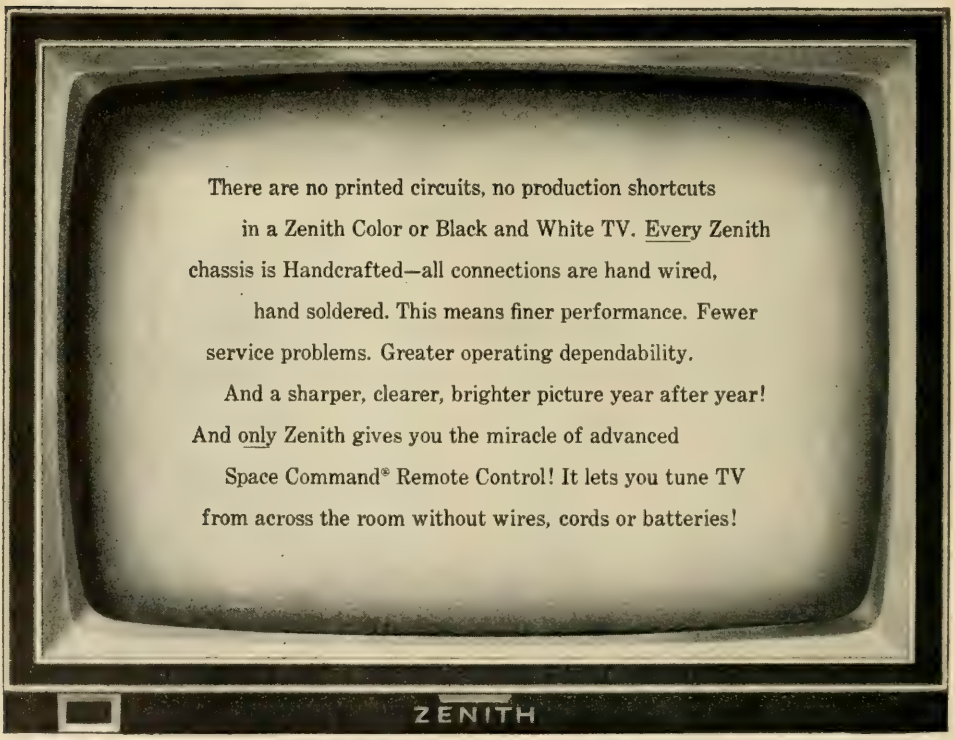
Hollywood certainly is wearing a HAPPY FACE. The industry's Joint Labor-Management Committee has been to Washington several times on so-called runaway production. The necessity for many pictures being made abroad, such as locale of story, contractual arrangements with stars demanding point of lensing, is a foregone must.

Then, too, there's every indication one of the most modern studios in the world will be built here in Los Angeles County in the future, what with 20th-Fox, M-G-M and Columbia joining hands in seeking a site to accomplish this as a joint venture. The most advanced technical devices, electronics and affinitive appurtenances will be established in what could be called a new awakening for Hollywood. Certainly Universal, combined with Revue, at Universal City, is leading the way on its own, the results of which should be forthcoming by the year end. These two important factors will be Hollywood's answer to any country which challenges its integrity or knowhow.

It is heartwarming to note the oncoming summer months will be the best in some years for all studios. Of course each will be helped by TV production, particularly M-G-M which will be booming all over the lot, not to overlook Universal-Revue, Columbia-Screen Gems and others.

Cinerama, Panavision and Todd-AO, will be prominent with new techniques to stir up exciting interest come Fall. Advances made by each will be officially unwrapped for the betterment of production and industry as a whole.

But, to quote a meek observer at the AMPP, "We expected one of the biggest production years this year." The statement is based on magnetic impulses which have a peculiar way of attracting sound information.



For instance, last year 174 films were released in the United States. Of this number 87 were produced and released by U. S. companies here. A like number were made abroad, 35 by American companies, 12 by members of AMPP.

In 1961, there were 142 pictures released, 31 produced by American companies, 11 produced by non-American companies but released by U. S. distributors, with the balance of products made by American firms in this country.

The Code Authority of AMPP recently announced approval of 52 films for the first quarter this year. This compares with 46 for the 1961 period. As for scripts, an indice for upcoming productions, 55 scripts were approved this first quarter against 37 last year, same time, for a plus of almost 50 per cent.

With all the facts combined, is there any doubt Hollywood is wearing A HAPPY FACE?

If everyone knew this almost everyone would own a Zenith TV!

Completely new in design and concept, the RKO 23rd Street, a luxurious addition to the famous RKO circuit of theatres from coast to coast, is a departure from the old - and a giant step into the future. From the shrubberied walks from which floodlights illuminate the walls - to the charming park areas - from its accoustical feats of engineering in optical, 4 and 6 channel stereo-sound and surround speakers - to its projection of a perfect picture in either 35MM, 70MM, Cinemascope, or regular screen ratio - from its dazzling decor to its unique water-fall mural it is a design of beauty and imagination. Cinemagoers will welcome this distinguished house and its promise of the best in screen entertainment from the film markets of the world. It is a crowning achievement, significant of RKO theatres continuing growth.

None better! Terrytoons creations —Hector Heathcote, Silly Sidney, Hashimoto-San, Deputy Dawg, Luno the Soaring Stallion and Tim, and others—are the delight of vast audiences (for the fifth consecutive year, Terrytoons has been rated among the nation's top ten producers in Motion Picture Herald's Annual Short Subjects Poll!). You and your audiences will be delighted, too, when you book cartoons—in CinemaScope with Color by Deluxe—from the best company... Terrytoons

In The BEGINNING

There Was ENTERTAINMENT

Who had a sixth sense?

Who increased or killed a laugh?

Who was the assassin of "Rigor Boredom"?

Who was trained in building "Film Suspense"?

Who has been likened to a film architect or engineer?

Who assembled the picture with beauty, grace and precision?

Who was well acquainted with "face-on-the-cutting-room-floor"?

Who selected, shortened, lengthened and blended the whole into entertainment?
